'THE JOURNEY'

I awoke suddenly, cold sweat upon my forehead. Something about that dream seemed too real. That incarnate, she seemed familiar to me. Almost like I had seen her before, though I knew I hadn't. Perhaps she looked like someone I knew, but I couldn't quite come to terms with whom. One thing the dream did settle; today I would ask the people of the church if they knew anything of a kidnapping or Isabelle Kingdon...

Morgan and I left for the church early that morning. He claimed that churches and sunlight were his least favourite ideals and that he would like to avoid too much of both. He was fortunate in the fact that it was a cloudy day. He also asked if it would be possible for him to remain outside the main church building. As strange as the idea seemed, I made no objections. His reasons were his own and I made no attempt to pry into them. I spent much of my time talking to the vicar. When I found he knew nothing of a kidnapping, a strange idea came to me. I asked him if any women were part of the church. His response was negative. No women were part of the church, except for the woman who cleaned the church and its grounds. Just as I turned to leave, an old woman entered. I asked her if she was the lady who cleaned the church. She was.
