HOMework

Plan your time for homework:-

It's a good idea to set a time when you're going to do your homework—say 5 or 6p.m. Set the time aside for homework only. Sit down and tell yourself to stick to it. Tell yourself you can do some fun stuff, watch TV or talk with friends after as a reward. Some people find that music playing quietly in the background helps. When doing your homework, make sure you're comfortable and there are no unwanted distractions.

Attention pupils - is your bus pass incorrect or damaged? If so you can get a replacement free of charge - please see Mrs Slade in the Medical Room.

If you find it hard to concentrate for too long, try doing your homework in little bursts. If you have trouble sticking to something, do it for about 15/20 minutes, then get up and do something else. Take a break. After a while, go back and do another 15/20 minutes. You might be surprised to find that taking a break gives you more time to think about something you might be stuck on!

You could even have a timer that you set that rings when your time is up. This is a great way to change what can seem like an elephant-sized project into bite-sized chunks.
